**EDIT: It looks like APEX stopped all trading on GME****

I posted earlier in the megathread about trying to determine the true share price by playing around with the maximum limit sell orders that would go through. I am 80% DRS'd but have a few GME shares spread through a half dozen brokerages for shits from before learning about Computershare.

Even though Fidelity limits you to 30% above the current price, I was able to get $1025 go to through but was blocked trying for $1050. That would put their internalized price at $788 per share if the "price" they use for the 30% ticket limit is taken across all trades (lit & dark) within the brokerage.

Same game with Chuckie Schwab - Ticket went through at $3250 per share but was blocked at $3300.

I have a few shares in Sofi. Loading their ticket, **I COULD NOT BUY NOR SELL**. There is a grey banner at the top reading "Trading is currently restricted. Please check back later." and the submit button is greyed out.

Something's going on. Anyone else have trouble? First time I have encountered the "NO SELL" on the broker side.
