I see some posts where people are excited about these new rules, there's just one problem. There is no requirement to make the reporting public. The HF's will continue to fuck retail over, specifically GME, because no one will have access to these reports. Without independent, objective review, this means nothing at all.

Need proof? Just look at the action today. Where are we now? about + $2-3... down from being up $19.

These new rules will change nothing. GG is simply placating apes with what appears to be protections for retail investors.

Without true transparency, nothing will change. The lies, the cheating, the manipulation will all continue unchecked.

If GG was truly interested in fixing this shit show that is Wall St, he would make this public information for people to review, but he won't. He's protecting his pals.
