

Title: Am I retarded or smooth brained?

Author: 6SUPERMAN9

Created 2022-03-24 05:19:28 UTC

Permalink: /r/DDintoGME/comments/tlygid/am_i_retarded_or_smooth_brained/

Url: https://www.reddit.com/r/DDintoGME/comments/tlygid/am\_i\_retarded\_or\_smooth\_brained/

First of all, I am unbiased and own both AMC and GME for over a year now... but I still have a smooth brain.

So we're on a run up right now and I see both GME and AMC basically following each other no matter the announcements.

What I see in AMC is that it basically has a monopoly on the cinema industry (I think it owns cineplex in Canada too)... in which we know Hollywood will never "die"... so it seems like a stable industry. For GME I see mostly brick and mortar with huge moves into the online industry and getting high revenue... but can it compete with Walmart, Best-Buy, Amazon, etc. In the long run? there seems to be so many competitors.

Both seem to make big plays.

AMC acquiring a gold and silver mine during what we could call a recession experienced all around the world.

GME getting into NFT's... but haven't AMC been doing a couple of these for the past few months? I know NFT's can bring in a lot of money... but seems so to be so unstable.

Both are being manipulated as shit. I see GME doing the DRS shares and could potentially hold the whole float and thus creating a Margin call... but won't that affect AMC at the same time?

I also heard about AA selling AMC shares for a bit of money a while ago and GME Adam keeps buying shares... but won't this have little to no impact on MOASS? It basically gets down to sentiment.

So my question is why is GME considered a better play than AMC? I know it's the "main" play that started it all but right now, they both seem on the same path for MOASS.

I'm just a dumb ape tryna have a better understanding.

Thanks guys.

And as I said before, I own both equally so don't come at me for holding either one please.