

Title: What is the best argument for lack of insider buying?

Author: JustLurkingForNow

Created 2021-11-29 10:42:34 UTC

Permalink: /r/DDintoGME/comments/r4t6sm/what_is_the_best_argument_for_lack_of_insider/

Url:

https://www.reddit.com/r/DDintoGME/comments/r4t6sm/what\_is\_the\_best\_argument\_for\_lack\_of\_insider/

As a mid xxx ape, this is the one thing that I haven't come up with a decent argument for and would like some thoughts without being accused of FUD. I understand some insiders would have restrictions on when they could sell so they wouldn't be able to play the short squeeze but I think most of us are of the belief that regardless of a short squeeze, this company will be valued much higher a year from now.

Would their early knowledge of an nft marketplace launch be considered insider trading? Any other reasons?

Obviously there hasn't been significant insider selling either since Sherman left which is the good news.