Brokers aren't going to liquidate all non-registered GME shares, if that was the plan they'd have done it already. Not to mention if that does happen, the short interest drops to 0% instantly.

Remember the infinity pool discussions from last year? What ever happened to that idea? Why aren't we saying "DRS 98%" and force shorts to buy back the street name positions before the registered ones are given back to Wall St?

My DRS shares aren't for sale, I don't know about you guys.
