If anyone recalls the old prediction of as shares run out the institution would sell off longs to balance their own shorts. Someone posted on superstonk that put bets are starting to match 08 pre crash. And drs numbers continually grow decreasing float so by a little napkin math the current float is around 72 million with approximately 45-55 million in call options chain to me says when the Macd flips back positive it's going to go up not to mention we are headed into gaming release season holiday season and potentially one of gme biggest revenue quarters
