I am bullish for GME for the long term but I don't know if you heard about DeSo blockchain, which is the only blockchain that provides a new decentralized social media experience.

I've been using Desofy -the mobile application of DeSo- for over a year now and I have never felt more satisfied before. The feeling of ownership of my content, messages, activity and everything is priceless. All I am trying to say is that decentralization is being applied on everything else but somehow people forgot about the most important part which is our internet social life. I am sick of being treated like a product and all my private information being sold and bought between the well known and unknown companies. Our free accounts are not so much free as they promise.

I just want for once to search something on Google without having one millions ads of the same topic on Instagram, Facebook, etc.

Google reported once that 90% of their profits come from advertisements, that means regardless how much they make us feel we have control on our data by letting us choose if we want to share it or not, they are still getting it.

Decentralized social media and Desofy -the app I am using- haven't disappointed me for a year long and they are always trying to improve more to prove that we can be free of the current centralized social media platforms dominance.

Also as a content creator it provides many solutions to monetize my content. For example, there is something there called Diamonds, which is social tip instead of normal like. I can post a picture and get direct money from people tipping on my post!

Another method is Social tokens. Social tokens are coins created for every profile and gets its value from people buying and selling these coins. Like the real stock market but its between people. I can have people investing in me and growing their investments as I grow, which motivates me even more!

What do you think about decentralize social media? Do you have similar experiences?

Btw if you want to try out and know more about Desofy, you can check out their Discord:
