Am wondering if the general dip in tech today is cos SHF's need to raise funds to pay for the ever more expensive share loans for $GME shorting, and hence the market is going gently red all over.....

It's not margin calling, as we're not seeing any major movements, but it's a general "lets find some more money from somewhere else as we're in pretty deep with $GME" feel about it. Which is nice for us. Be nicer if there was a major spike on good GME news, but I can wait until after hours if I need to :-)
