Three moderators u/half_Dane, u/Bradduck_Flyntmoore, u/bah2o of a major GME related sub are also moderators of a sub called GameStopOfficial created 11 months ago even though it is not an official GameStop sub. The mods even say so if you dig into their announcement post. Calling yourself an official sub while not being official clearly breaks reddit rule 6. Even if there were no rules against it there is nothing good than can come of some randos on the Internet pretending to be the "Official" GameStop sub.

Proclaiming via sub name that you are an official GameStop sub crosses way too many lines. The only people that should be running an active reddit sub titled "GameStopOfficial" should be actual official GameStop staff.

Rule 6: Ensure people have predictable experiences on Reddit by properly labeling content and communities, particularly content that is graphic, sexually-explicit, or offensive.
