I've been thinking about how the reverse repo has been growing crazily for about 6 months. It hit me that what it probably is is all the cash we've been pouring into the dozen meme stocks including GME. We've known forever that they don't actually have any shares left of all these over sold stocks. So what to do with the cash if your not actually buying anything? Cash you might need liquid at a moments notice? As we've pushed them daily that pile of cash has been growing.
