I've never been against DRSing but never got around to it (mostly just the bystander effect). With all of the stuff going on after the dividend I want to secure at least some of my shares.

I hold my shares in Questrade in Canada and i had a chat with a representative recently about the process through them and it all sounded pretty straight forward. The only drawback i got was the fee that they charge for getting the shares over to Computershare. Came out to be around $450CAD to do it and i literally have every extra penny in GME.

I'm assuming the answer is no and I'm just gonna have to check the couch cushions until i get enough, but is there any cheaper way to have my shares transferred. I would hate to have to sell a good chunk of the shares to be able to DRS the rest of them.

Any tips would be much appreciated and if theres no way to do it cheaper anyone who could answer some n00b DRS questions i still have would be great. THANKS
