GME Outstanding Fails-To-Deliver Shares (sec.report)

You can see just from these official charts how heavily GME is shorted. You can easily count 10's of millions of Short positions that failed to deliver and that is equivalent to 1 billion shares per 10 million positions that failed to deliver. But if you look in March there aren't as many as before, which shows that Direct Registering our shares have been working and they haven't been as successful at shorting the stock . If you look at the first like its for the whole stock market and they actually calculate it for you and there are 1.9 billion bbbbbbillion failed to delivered short positions. I feel like we need to hit up other stocks and inform them of the importance of DRSing so we can attack hedge funds ability to profit and stay afloat. I have been trying to hit up TSLA subreddit but if we all worked together and informed other retail traders I feel like we can make a big difference
