I want to start this with a quote. "If you can do something about a situation, why worry. If you can't do something about a situation why worry?" Worrying is pointless, but this is not my point. My takeaway from this quote is that if you can do something about a situation focus everything on doing that thing and don't waste energy or time worrying. My greatest concern is not how MOASS might be completely fucked by HFs or the government with new types of unforeseen fuckery, but rather how it could be delayed/stalled out by new and old apes that have grown impatient or forgotten the DD that we all have been reading for months when MOASS occurs.

The thing I am trying to act against instead of worrying about is the potential for a leak in the fuel tanks when we start our journey towards Alpha Centauri. The greatest thing we can do besides buy, hodl, and DRS, is review DD when we forget, question the thesis, have an unexpected market event dismay us or remember that we have no way of knowing exactly what awaits us past the limits of the upper atmosphere.

With that said I have questions and I hope someone can point me to the DD or at least a few DD title's to answer these questions. I feel that when MOASS begins we will need to repost/relink to the time point specific DD so we can limit the amount of paper handing as our rocket begins to ascend. My questions are:

1. "Selling on the way down" <-- How will we spot the top? Since we cannot know if there will be other tricks up the hedgies'/Kenny's mayo covered sleeves, is it possible that they could somehow create a "false top" if enough people sell early? Will this be an exponential ascent with few or very small dips?

2. Selling - Will this look the same as a regular sell order or will there be more to it if I am selling a share from my small pile of non-DRS shares for a telephone number? Limit or market? Should I sell in the morning or afternoon?

3. Routing - Do I need to consider how my sell order is being routed (or is this only a concern for buying stonks) when we reach the top and begin to descend?

4. Tax sheltering - Who should I consult with after my bank account looks like the first 100 digits of pi?

Some of these questions I have begun to dig into, but I want to be sure I am as prepared as possible when MOASS begins so the rocket makes it all the way to the end of the journey without stalling on the way up.

After reading "A wide and rambling analysis of where we are", I wrote this as a comment and decided it might serve it's purpose better as a post. First off I don't believe the post mentioned above is analysis at all and is at best a nervous ape looking for consoling and at worst FUD. But it did make me want to write this post so there may be a silver lining.

I am an xx hodler and have DRS'd some of my non retirement shares and am about to begin a transfer to my brand new CS IRA registered account Monday from Fidelity. I fully believe in the thesis and the power of DRS to ignite the rocket. I look forward to seeing all you beautiful apes in our new zero gravity home soon!
