Okay, this is probably part 3 of this odyssey.

I'm not always the quickest so things sometimes take me a little longer than it may take you young 'uns but I managed to open an IBKR account.

Transfer money in from my bank account.

Change most of that to USD.

Purchase X amount of GME shares.

Transfer request X-1 GME shares to CompuShare.

I really have to thank all the apes who helped and held my hands through those processes, I was frustrating myself so I can only imagine what it must like for others to watch me fuddle through.

Also thank you to the ape who told me how to check and see how my transfer was progressing.

In any case, this morning I checked again and I got this message.

Your DRS position transfer request has been completed and the transferred assets are now available.

I assume my letter of confirmation from CompuShare will be arriving at some stage?

In any case, I am so grateful to everyone who've taken the time to help me. I really feel like I'm part of something special here. I'm not going to lie, I'm here to make life-changing money but along the way I've gotten so angry at the way the little guys have been taken advantage of for years and I really hope this movement will result in a better fairer world for everyone. At the moment it's a fixed carney game that masquerades as an open market and we are the marks. That bit at the end of The Big Short where Mark Baum looks at people going about their daily lives with no idea that their savings, their retirement funds, their actual futures and that of their children is being stolen and cheated from them. I'm in it now for a level playing field but let's not pretend the money won't be nice too.
