Welp, months ago everyone was saying Chase was horrible, and that this would bring down all of the major banks. So I closed down my Chase account and moved over everything into a "cash management account" with Fidelity. Now, Fidelity is apparently the worst thing ever, so where the fuck do I keep my money and who the fuck do I bank with? Personally I'm starting to feel like things are getting just a little bit too ridiculous...I'm almost thinking of backtracking back to Chase because they really never treated me wrongly and always took care of me.
