

Title: Petition to HBO: You Glossed Over the Most Important Part

Author: therealbigcheez

Created 2022-03-08 21:14:21 UTC

Permalink: /r/DDintoGME/comments/t9r32h/petition_to_hbo_you_glossed_over_the_most/

Url: https://www.reddit.com/r/DDintoGME/comments/t9r32h/petition_to_hbo_you_glossed_over_the_most/

Great Intro for Those Outside This Community

I finally got a chance to watch the 2-part HBO documentary, Gaming Wall Street, and I gotta say, it was pretty good. I think they probably could have played the narrative out a bit differently, but it still packed a punch. It still had Wes Christian. It still had Dr. Susanne Trimboth. They both still told their stories. They both still fuck.

The second part definitely dove in deeper to the heart of the issue, discussing just how rampant fraud is in this saga and closed by saying how it will continue to be until we can “master the system” and “take our system back.” Inspiring stuff. Apes together strong.

I hope this documentary reaches people who otherwise think that the system is just fine and awakens them to the fact that crime has been, and will continue to be, a central theme of the stock market, and that GameStop can serve as the galvanizing force to change that for good.

With that said...

Here's What Pissed Me THE FUCK Off

Naked short selling was front and center. It was described in a digestible manner, both from a mechanical standpoint and through the lens of the loopholes contained within the self-governed rules. They then went into depth telling the story of David Wenger, the former Wall-Streeter turned transparency advocate, whose tool could be used to uncover discrepancies in the market. They portrayed this as the savior of the system. This...was disingenuous. Not that he was the problem (I actually think he is great) – my issue here is with the filmmaker, because an important detail was completely left out.

DRS was not mentioned once in the film. Not a single god damn time.

But...

They did acknowledge it. THAT. PISSED. ME. OFF. Disingenuous as fuck.

At the very end, Dr. Trimboth's closing caption read: “Susanne inspired retail investors to take 5.2 million GameStop shares away from brokers, making it impossible to lend them out to short sellers.”

They literally used the phrase “impossible to lend...to short sellers” and cited the very public number that was included in GameStop's Q3 10-Q filing:

>As of October 31, 2021, 5.2 million shares of our Class A common stock were directly registered with our transfer agent, Computershare.

THEY KNOW DIRECT SHARE REGISTRATION WITH COMPUTERSHARE MAKES IT IMPOSSIBLE TO LEND TO SHORT SELLERS AND THEY DID NOT MENTION IT EVEN ONCE.

Sorry for yelling, but that fucking pissed me off.

Buy. Hold. DRS. Educate.

Get your friends and relatives to watch this to help explain the basics, but it's on us to stay after the credits and talk about what exactly it was Dr. Trimboth inspired us to do and why exactly it is capable of doing what HBO claimed it could.

If we wanna take our system back, we need to put in the work. Power to the Players.