

Title: Thoughts on GameStop and retail changing the world

Author: MarcinTheMartian

Created 2022-01-27 23:17:16 UTC

Permalink: /r/GME/comments/sebpdo/thoughts_on_gamestop_and_retail_changing_the_world/

Url: https://www.reddit.com/r/GME/comments/sebpdo/thoughts_on_gamestop_and_retail_changing_the_world/

Preface: I'm a smooth brained XX ape, and this post may be obvious to most.

I know economies rise and fall due to a variety of circumstances that societies have to go through. But part of me really believes there are big implications to this GameStop adventure that also began to make everything shit the bed.

This might 'naturally' (quotes for, ya know, rigged system) happen due to shifts in politics, housing bubbles, or whatever the fuck reasons, but something about this time feels as if a lot of it is tied to GameStop and retail.

I mean, killing retail would benefit so many / all of the tech corps and investors. Oh, you want to go to a store? Can't, brick and mortar no longer exists. Instead, they'll pay someone an unlivable wage to deliver anything right to your door while we pay companies a premium for it.

I just feel that the longer we hold GameStop the worse things may get. And that's fine by me. We're not stupid hedgies with short sighted goals looking for profits. The implications of a market collapse or equivalent as a result of holding retail alive are great. Not only is it a "Fuck You" to hedgies, but also a statement that we don't want to get rid of lives outside of the fucking meta verse. And the hedgies bet wrong that we'd get fucked and get sucked into it regardless.

The only thing I can hope for is that if there's a collapse of sorts as a result of the squeeze, that all of us who have been part of it don't get fucked again.

We can't and won't be taken advantage of again.

tl;dr: Everything is collapsing because of our bets on retail and GameStop. Let's hope when it all comes to fruition we can rightfully benefit and not get taken advantage of by a shit system.