

Title: Why the DTCC fraud is a MASSIVE F@#$ing deal.

Author: TheUltimator5

Created 2022-08-31 02:13:03 UTC

Permalink: /r/DDintoGME/comments/x21h0n/why_the_dtcc_fraud_is_a_massive_fing_deal/

Url:

https://www.reddit.com/r/DDintoGME/comments/x21h0n/why_the_dtcc_fraud_is_a_massive_fing_deal/

Since we need to keep reminding everyone that the DTCC committed international securities fraud, I am going to explain briefly why it we cannot just forget about it.

So what exactly happened??? Here is my speculative take:

- 1) Gamestop issued solicit shares to computershare (approx 50% were then given to apes)
- 2) computershare then gave the remaining 50% to the DTCC
- 3) the DTCC likely gave their 50% (now 2x the original float btw) to their short selling buddies to close out approximately 100 million short positions risk free.
- 4) the DTCC finally told all the brokers to treat the splivvy as a normal stock split.

In this scenario, the SHFs closed out 100 million short positions before the split took effect. Who now is on the other side of short trades??? Are brokers all on the hook?

I personally don't want to find out and get stuck with my shares in the open.

Also wonder why the cost to borrow rates have dropped so much??? 100 million shorts potentially just poofed out of existence as soon as the DTCC committed international securities fraud.