Is there any timeframe between quitting and opening an account anyways?

I have absolutely no MNPI on GameStop nor potential to have acquired any through my work or otherwise.

It's just kinda a blanket rule at my firm that you can only hold brokerages at fidelity or thosefuckersatGoldman (so they can spy on us). Anyone ever deal with buying or selling stock shortly after leaving a finance job that had stock restrictions? Did they make it hard to open new accounts, positions, or sell stock? Did you have to reach out to your prior employer to have a restriction lifted?
