What do you think of -45% after hours?

Point being WALL ST trying to get people excited about anything but GME. For Pete's sake, Cramer was hyping it up telling people they're dumb for not buying bbbby!

Just to disappoint after another one of their predictable run ups / short attacks.

Anything we see is strategic play on their end, getting closer to end game.

Everything since and before January '21 has been nothing but CRIME! They just happened to get caught off guard.

They want it to look like baby is shorted more than gme, (even though we know it's not by a far long shot).

And now there's a bunch of bag holders who just watched this crash the past couple days. I just hope they know how to hodl and not sell, because that's just what shf want. They are out here trying to shake paper hands. Might as well bend over and hand them the lube.

Hell, I don't even know where the sell button is

Until the float is locked, or at least 74.1%, anything on exchange is pure manipulation.

Don't fall for it

DRS is the way
