A photograph of a piece of paper with a quote. The text is written in a serif font and is slightly tilted. The background of the paper is a light beige color. The quote is about quantum physics and human perception, mentioning a map of Barcelona and electrical signals.

Alice: "I believe most conflicts on this planet exist because humans tend to mistake their map of reality for actual reality. By curing just that we could end dogmatism, irrational intolerance, relationship issues, and religious wars. Nobody could insist on their beliefs anymore. It's evident that the map of Barcelona is not the same as Barcelona. There is no real beach on the map. In the same way, we never perceive reality as it is, just our own personal map of it, which gets triggered by electrical signals coming from our senses. If people would understand that alone, they would stop fighting each other due to differences in their maps. Instead, they would want to learn from each other to improve and extend their personal maps of reality. That would be a huge step closer to world peace, motherfucker."
