So I started transferring my shares to CS back in October right before the big fidel glitch rush. I did this through TDA my only broker at the time.

This process took over 6 weeks & since then I've gone the route of transfer to Fidel, then fidel to CS.

The initial xfer was xxx shares. No small amount. & as they begin to flip to long term I was curious as to their cost basis & purchase dates. Now, as I've continued to DRS through Fidel, the stats are all there. All purchase dates & cost, pretty clear.

I call CS (they are terrible to verify through btw) they point at TD for the info. TD can't find the info either, doesn't seem to exist on the basic operator end. He puts me on hold & says he needs to talk to another team. He comes back in 10 & says they have the info, but for some reason CS & TD have an issue transferring this info (it's technical). He points out this seems to be a thing with GME ONLY. Not moviestock, not any others.....

Then, he says they found the info! But... they can't get it to CS (the darn technical issue!) so I am free to send this to them if I want...

The info comes. It's a spreadsheet. I honestly feel they copy pasted my buy orders to it. It also has the disclaimer

"Important Disclaimer: Intraday data is at least 20-minutes delayed. GainsKeeper® service and tax lot and performance reporting is offered and conducted by Wolters Kluwer Financial Services, Inc. ("WKFS") and is made available by TD Ameritrade for general reference and education purposes only. TD Ameritrade is not responsible for the reliability or suitability of the information. "

Maybe this is common or a boilerplate disclaimer, but shouldn't there be more? I'm supposed to take a basic pdf, which I could easily alter, & give it to CS on my own, so I can keep track of long vs short term & capital gains?!?!?!

Also, this could be tinfoil, but I feel like asking me to forward this info takes their hand out of it & frees them from giving false info?

I'm totally blown away by all this & will take any info for those that know more about this shit...
