Guess I am looking for some reassurance, it seems to me the more shares that have been DRS'd the more the shorts are able to manipulate the share price? That in itself does not make any sense to me, but everyday I see the charts it looks like the hedge funds have a death grip on the share price and no one but us gives a damn. Some days it literally looks like they are trying to draw a hand giving us the finger. A couple weeks ago someone had mentioned the price always goes up after a W formation, then sure enough the next day it looked like they drew a W with the price chart. I trust the DD that has been done, but how much crime does that allow for? 10% 50% 10000%? Seems they have the gov, doj, sec and whoever else they need on their payroll to make this a win for them.

Also Tinfoil hat theory here: The Russian attack on Ukraine was orchestrated to drive consumer product prices threw the roof (Gas, Food, etc) so regular retail investors cannot afford to buy these tasty dips they keep providing us. I know my funds for this weeks GME buy was just used up by filling my gas tanks and buying groceries this weekend. :(
