

Title: Called this one...

Author: disoriented_llama

Created 2021-09-07 21:20:17 UTC

Permalink: /r/TheGloryHodl/comments/pjw922/called_this_one/

Url: /r/Superstonk/comments/pju5wo/citadel_has_become_insolvent_its_short_positions/

Is_self: False

Linked Post:

Body:

This talk about 'cycles' being more important than anything has got me slappin' my knee.

Anyone remember the video of a guy pacing for over 2 hours on his cell phone inside the citadel building in the middle of the night on a weekend a couple months ago?

How about when they changed their google hours around the same time so the amount of employees working couldn't be tracked?

I'm guessing you haven't missed Kendoff's plane flying between Africa, Europe, and the US for the past few weeks?

That lovely letter in response to an ape's FOIA request on Citadel from the SEC also comes to mind - particularly because it included language which basically confirmed the SEC was working with law enforcement.

Let's transport ourselves for a minute and imagine:

If the SEC & its law enforcement partner discovered Citadel had been participating in illegal activity, what would be the fairest way to handle the situation?

How could action be taken that:

1. Gives a chance to get out of a short position a person or firm was manipulated into taking by Kenny Grifferson / Jeffrey Bozos' media empire

2. Perpetuates the illusion that the US market is still 'fair and free'

3. Doesn't give immediate confirmation to the whole world that GME investors were right about the fraud

4. Makes GME investors sell the hundreds and hundreds of millions of god damn GME shares they've been piling up for 8 fucking months

Answer: Following through on creation of a hidden 'expert market' where billions of naked shorts Citadel has been piling up for decades can be bought back (non-GME shares) out of public view and over time as to not destabilize the lit markets will finally end - in the words of Gensler - 'the Gamestop saga'. He referred to it as 'the Gamestop saga' because Gamestop was the idiosyncratic risk that emerged in the basket of algorithmically shorted retail securities present at Citadel.

The best way to hide that it was triggered by Gamestop is to buy those shares back last.

Lets not forget my personal favorite bit of confirmation bias, from The Man Himself:

<https://twitter.com/vryancohen/status/1425606429574979584?s=20>

DiOs MiO hAn MaTaDo Ha KeNnY! bAsTaRdOs!

Oh my god they killed Kenny! Bastards!

You feel free to dip as far as you want, GME. You can bet your ass I'm not giving up this guaranteed payday!

EDIT:

Made some corrections to OP I fucked up on and wanted to add a note:

If this is the case, deadlines and dates are out of the window for the most part. Reg Sho allows the SEC to make changes to deadlines and policies at their discretion for the market's sake.

That means they could wait for the most unexpected moment, or expected moment to buy back shares. I have a feeling old price patterns are about to change.