Hello all. u/losingmoreyears here.

There is a cycle of fuckery that has been perpetuated far too long.

I was supposed to enter this sub and organize groups to work on various puzzles associated with the marvel that is Gamestop.

Instead, someone broke into these plans and has been slowly handing out all the goodies to their friends. They've justified this by spreading disinformation about me and characterizing me as a bad person. There have been "teaching" moments.

There is a contingency of people who have believed this disinformation and have spent the past 8 years stalking me, putting malware on my phones and computers, and performing arbitrary fucked up social experiments.

In addition:

- bribed dates for information
- stole my purse & passport this weekend
- made false reports to my university
- leveraged those around me to fuck with me
- induced amnesia using methodology I won't use here

Over the past 5 months:

- into my home several times. Bizarrely moving things around to intimidate me, making creepy piles of objects
- putting rose thorns in my shoes
- spiking my drinks
- blowing drugs in my face
- dressing up in disguise

I wouldn't have known about the rose thorns unless I hadn't seen the plans. Yes, there is a group who does shit like that. They love doing spy things which is fine, but they hurt people. Part of the disinformation was making me out to be someone they wanted "to get" when I've never met these people before - did see their files and pics, so it's interesting to see various members stalking me.

All because I am the "last" person to go through a really messed up experience. Everyone has delegated all the risk of this endeavor onto me, yet want me to jump hoop through invisible hoop. It's insane. Everyone wants me to prove something about myself while offering nothing of themselves.

This past weekend, I met someone who def has answers. I was supposed to follow strangers to some type of endpoint. For women, there's no way of knowing where that goes - statistically it's pretty bad even with people we know. There's little understanding of this experience. In addition, it was brought to my attention this person may be convinced that I am some type of terrible person based on the most ridiculous information, so I do not know if there was a trap of some sort.

So what is this disinformation? The major one is that I want to sleep with everyone's husbands and wives of people I've never met. Why the fuck would I be romantically interested in any of you after you've treated me like garbage?! Or the line that I'm racist. I used to infiltrate white supremacist boards and try to bring them back to the light so they could join our gaming club and go on raids. Except none of them were gamers, but that's aight.

I can't make this shit up, y'all. It really is this simple.

I haven't reached out because this has been fromt-run like Kenny does all casual like on a typical Tuesday. Someone desperately wants me to take the blame for something they did. Someone desperately wants me to be traumatized. Someone desperately wants me to go crazy. Someone desperately wants others to think that I am stupid, inept and incapable.

Conversations with the right people are priceless. Every single person was told something different so they would think that the other person is terrible or untrustworthy. So they wouldn't communicate. It's a great line, but you all have to speak with me, too. It's a two-way street and the only way to clear up the disinformation.

There have been so many arbitrary set-ups meant to "get me." My entire senior year of college. Getting off the train this weekend to the Baron telling me to ask any Caribbean restaurant who he is (in Haiti, there is tension between Christians and those practicing Vodou. You don't just ask that question). During a panic attack, I said I was scared of dogs so now I've been tested with all sorts of dog meetings. There was a nice staged dog attack, too.

All of this to make me look bad because they believe it will characterize me as a "bad" person so I get eliminated from some mystery end point that might add some happiness to my life. Then asking me "Do you have anything to admit?" Tha fuck is that?!

It's dirty, it's unethical, and, quite frankly, plain rude. I'm not traumatized; I'm offended that people are treating me as an unfeeling object while touting themselves as some type of ethicists. In science, there is consent. In science, if a subject is harmed then they receive compensation for care. This isn't science; this is psychological terrorism.

But despite that, I'm still standing. I came into the world a certain way. I was born Resilient. That is my nature. Life is already hard as it is - why spend resources making it worse rather than spending those resources to make it better? You do see what you've done here, right? You're acting like the very people you claim to despise.

So why are people doing this? Because they want me to look unworthy or horrible to someone so their chances of accessing a gazillion dollars or other incentives improves. They're desperate because they've promised so much to everyone along the way and they're way over-leveraged.

So step away from the keyboard, find an organization and donate the time you would spend harassing me on feeding the homeless. The situation was already bad, but COVID has exacerbated the problem. Affluent neighborhoods are getting entirety communities tossed out at literally dawn without warning. Many don't have cell phones so they can't track one another down. Show up to meetings where decisions are made in your region, ward, town, county or city. Yes, donations are needed, but, right now, manpower is what is needed most.

Those billions aren't for 6 lambos or 500 houses for your friends. It's earmarked for the homeless in need of shelter, food and mental health services. And a secure and modestly reasonable future for loved ones.

When this was all being planned, I didn't believe it was real. But here we are. I could be curing some disease right now. I could be teaching everyone about ciphers and crypto. But instead I'm dealing with a group that is trolling someone who is on their side, not against them.

There may be someone telling you all in some chat that I'm not able to "do this" that you should all trust them instead. Don't listen. This person may have set all of us up with others - and it's not who you think. It's not anyone mentioned in this sub. You won't know who. The best thing to do is for all of us is to chat to reverse this divide, conquer and misinform.

Several of you have seen me, one has even spoken with me - btw, thanks for that. It's the first time someone has simply just spoken with me and treated me like a person in this experience. I'm not sure what group you're a part of - there are about 10 different ones directed at me right now (or one group pretending to be many others). Uncertain if you want to steal my organs or if you want to set me up with a someone from Mars. But thanks for being a bro for a couple moments. Really appreciate it.
