

Title: Burry Tweet: is he referring to short interest when he says INTERESTing?

Author: MelvinCapital

Created 2021-09-14 07:32:39 UTC

Permalink: /r/DDintoGME/comments/pny56f/burry_tweet_is_he_referring_to_short_interest/

Url:

https://www.reddit.com/r/DDintoGME/comments/pny56f/burry_tweet_is_he_referring_to_short_interest/

I saw a post from another ape who shared data about the short interest back at the end of 2019, which is when Burry's tweet references. The peak shorted shares was about 68 million, and this was during the December of 2019.

here's the link to the tweet

Could it be that he was saying that the short interest is why he was long back then?

And with all these posts saying that short interest has gone up even higher, potentially to hundreds of millions of shares, well doesn't that make GME a really interesting long now???

And what about the 'rational' part? It's not a rational long any more. Look at this tweet I found:

"this is unnatural, insane and dangerous"

Maybe the hidden meaning is that GME is a really interesting long position to hold, and it's a wild ride