Funds shorted GameStop believing it would go bankrupt and they'd pay no taxes on their filthy lucre. Then RC joined the show. GameStop now has over a billion dollars on hand, plus nearly a billion in inventory. And a leadership team that believes actions speak louder than words.

At current cost and spending, GameStop could not sell a single item and stay in business as they are for 18 years (estimate).

SI calculation changed literally overnight last year, so current SI percents are not accurate when compared to previous SI.

Funds hunt stop losses, causing additional downward pressure. Please don't use them.

Multiple tricks are being used to short $GME and hide actual SI, including swaps, dark pool, off exchange, and ETF baskets.

DRS numbers are increasing. Media doesn't discuss this at all, which is strange as it is an uncommon approach and you'd think they'd discuss it.

TL;DR Buy, hold, register, shop GameStop. You'll be glad you did.
