I think we all have noticed the drops in the morning and also seemingly every afternoon.

I've went through and tracked opening price and price at 2PM for as far back as I could (November 4th)

Over that span GME has lost an average of .863% per day, with an average price of $186.69.

GME at 2pm over that span has an average price of $183.16 and is below the next days opening price by an average of 1.53%

The fact that each day GME gains an average of 1.53% from 2-4 PM each day is crazy and points to the fact that they are very scared at 2PM. We're all individual investors and this isn't financial advice but all my future buys that aren't directly through computershare will be at 1:59 to get the best deal as well as put additional pressure on their margin requirements.

I think this points to Margin calls being around 2PM I believe there is also one in the morning but 10AM and 10:30 are not them.
