

Title: As always, I might be misinformed about things. I'm not, in this case.

Author: klykerly

Created 2022-08-08 00:45:30 UTC

Permalink: /r/GME/comments/wiuz2e/as_always_i_might_be_misinformed_about_things_im/

Url:

https://www.reddit.com/r/GME/comments/wiuz2e/as_always_i_might_be_misinformed_about_things_im/

GameStop's stock split in the form of a dividend seems to be riling up a lot of folks. How I understand it is this:

The stock dividend is an opportunity to own more GME. It is not a gift. The corporate action of all this really is not even about individual investors. Everyone's stock got multiplied by 4. On paper, beneficially, if you hold with a broker. You make these shares real by DRSing these extra 3. You perform your own stock recall, by DRSing them, by removing them from the DTC. GameStop won't and can't do this. You do it. It's what's behind the whole "what you can do for your company" trope.

I honestly don't know why, with all the sterling quality DD over the last couple of years and hundreds upon hundreds of positive reports by shareholders about the process, it's even an issue. Of course [insert literally any broker name here] they processed the sp[lit the way they did. Brokers have done nothing wrong. To them this is a tempest in a teapot (at least up to this point); across their investor base is SO MUCH to be about that I want to applaud them for being as nice as these screen shots suggest. You get real shares by DRSing.

You get real shares by DRSing.

You get real shares by DRSing.

You get real shares by DRSing.

You get rekt by playing victim and whining on Reddit.

DRS YOUR SHIT.