Page 26: "The run-up in GME stock price coincided with buying by those with short positions. However, it also shows that such buying was a small fraction of overall buy volume, and that GME share prices continued to be high after the direct effects of covering short positions would have waned"

If short interest was over 200% (as reported prior to changing the way short interest is calculated) and only a small fraction of the overall buy volume was shorts covering, then the shorts did not cover.
