Just finished watching the Jon Stewart Wall Street episode and the HBO Gaming Wall Street episodes. Both were better at shedding light on the price fuckery than GameStop: Rise of the Players. But none of these three talk about DRS/Computershare/Direct Registering GME stock in order to pull them out of the DTCC and get them in Book entry in your name so they can't be lent out. I know that this is the silver bullet that will fuk the Hedgies. I know that once we lock the float there will be irrefutable proof that there have been more shares created than were originally issued by GameStop. Why is this not mentioned in any of these three documentaries? Why did I get my hopes up again only to be let down again. Please somebody explain it to me like I'm retarded.
