Okay, so hear me out Apes because I know we all hate to be disappointed with dates. Yet, here I go with a good idea of the GameStop NFT Marketplace launch timeline. All links below from where I sourced this DD.

From what LoopRing keeps teasing on Twitter, it sounds like it will happen in LoopRings Q4 (Oct-Dec). Loopring is one of the top choices, if not the best choice for Layer 2 tech currently available. They even responded to the creator of ethereum today with some big balls, talking about a "Partner who is bringing a NFT Marketplace to Loopring". And essentially saying they are the best Layer2 option available right now. They also have super low fees compared to their peers and are estimating to be 400 times cheaper than trading NFTs on than OpenSea.

So why is LoopRing going to be the choice?

- Very few companies are properly setup right now to the degree of LoopRing in terms of tech/function
- GME head of Blockchain (Matt Finestone) used to work at LoopRing. His resignation letter to LoopRing is linked below. Another Ape just hooked me up with it.
- Finestone is an expert in Blockchain, Crypto, LoopRing, zkrollup's and he is also a Chartered Financial Analyst
- Finestone worked on the LoopRing Whitepaper publication (link below)
- LoopRing has some of the lowest fees available and is fast and secure
- LoopRing has stated multiple times they are bringing on a major partner's NFT Marketplace in Q4

Edit: ruh row, who gave me the all seeing award, DFV wut doing?

For those apes that are saying WTF is LoopRing?

2nd confirmation of Q4 is a Tweet that the next update is a major NFT update:

Little moon related tweet doesn't hurt:

Or this other moon themed one either:

Based on all the above, I think this is one of the stronger associations we have with GameStop, especially given Matt Finestone's background.
