I started off with the popcorn stock early last year. HODLED my ass off and disregarded the volatility for most of last year. But something always felt off. Everything felt so fake and felt like I was caught up in a high school drama. It was the fact that AA was trying so hard to push a positive persona on the internet. Something he was way too unfamiliar with. I cringed at his posts with the crappy photos he would always include. He was milking the whole situation trying to bring some sort of "legacy title" before he retired. Yes, he said he was going to sell several times last year but why again on 1/16? I wonder why??

Now let's look over at GME. The respect I have for this company's executives and insiders is just wow. Speechless. Look at the last time someone sold! They know what the heck is going on. They deserve to milk out with fame and all that stuff once this is over. The silent sea. Is the deadly sea. Say no more. Just HODL HODL HODL. and obviously, D R S.
