So I called up vanguard about the stock splidend for GME and got transferred around till I got to a guy in their investments wing.

Here is what was said though this is paraphrasing and also a trust me bro scenario.

Me: "I was wondering about the recent stock split dividend for GameStop stock. Did I get the stock split in the form of a dividend as in GameStop distributed shares to you and those are what the numbers in my account show or did you guys just internally split the stock?"

Vanguard: "we just did what we usually do for stock splits in that we show that you have 4x as many stocks as you had on the record date."

Me: " so you didn't receive anything from GameStop or the DTCC or anyone you just split the stock internally for accounting purposes?"

Vanguard: "yes."

This is very bullish it seems they tried to get away with this shit again, the vast majority of my shares are in an IRA and I didn't want to go through the hassle of DRSing them, but now I definitely am. So if anyone could drop a link that would be much appreciated!
