Options and buying was getting fucked since January. We need to move to the Fidelity to make sure we have our shares.

And then we amazingly realize that buying and holding in Fidelity is not enough. We as a group discover that IEX exchanges is the good way to go to stop routing to the market makers(a.k.a Citadel). This group is amazingly discovering step by step winning way for us although we are all the individual investors.

Then we realize that the DTCC is a final boss. We need to move our share from the final boss and go to the bright side. We have numerous DD about DRS to help the newbie, to spread out the love to Gamestop stock and how we think we will become millionaire thanks to this. This community is growing and becoming the most united community because of one reason: I like the stock.

Then we realize that if we leave high percentage of our shares in Fidelity, we will get fucked. We start the movement about DRS 100% and start the infinity pool in the DRS. We never stop changing to fight against the boss.

And this week we have a fud about 'book' and 'plan', and we discover those things are bullshit after just some hours thanks to the confirmation from Computer Share.

I have been holding since February. I am writing this to show you that this community is growing every day to fight against the boss. I am the gen Z and I'm almost 20, which is the most impatient age. I need to make money for myself to study university but I'm never tired of this waiting because I like the stock. The post in Superstonk, I don't know who you are but if you cannot patiently wait, it means you did not realize how this community changes.

I love the stock! That's all
