Hey guys, It's me. ASBT. The frog finder among us.

I've been on the side lines continuing my DD into what has created the situation that we know as GAMESTOP.

Before I begin, Remember that any action purposely done with the intention of causing a "short squeeze" is completely illegal. Also collusion on ANY basis is grounds for litigation.

But what if you were the chairman? How could you communicate in a fashion that says "sit tight" without saying anything directive at the retail investors? What if you had literally done what was written in the merger filing that created the Corp that you are running, well maybe we could dodge that legal bullet eh?

This is a snippet from this filing on GME's website of the 2005 merger filing. <https://news.gamestop.com/static-files/45932f95-1191-4301-bcc8-534398f8c21c>

Followed by Chairman and Gamestop's twitter pages going dark. see? it's beautiful. He looks cool in a Johnny Cash meets Jiu Jitsu kind of way right? Chairman Ryan Cohen reminds me of John Wick in this. :D

<https://www.otcmarkets.com/files/ellenoff-going-dark.pdf> is the link to OTCMARKETS explanation of what GOING DARK is.

So imagine this shit right? Imagine that you were under a gag order and couldn't talk. well you found a way to communicate using simple subtleties.

Like going dark. or like referencing companies that were acquired by companies that were later contracted, or acquired even, by Amazon in the end.

Here is my theory that the chairman showed us on his personal and company page that he is going dark. What does going dark mean? OTC baby. A closing of outstanding shares which the shorts rely on. Couple that with the "units" being preferred class A shares and it would allow Retail Investors to obtain, per synthetic position, a REAL share. All of retail would be holding real shares. ALL of us. Institutional Ownership would be at a fukt position because of retraction of all outstanding shares.

Nowhere in the history of the company has GameStop been delisted as was planned in the 2005 merger filing. These entities never got delisted. Because it hasn't happened yet. This would be the perfect play to anticipate the economic shitstorm brewing while allowing retail investors to literally have more voting power than institutions by a HUGE ratio.

This is my thesis. This is literally my hope and dream. This is literally what I would do if I was the Chairman. Want to understand the owner? Put yourself in his specific shoes. Understand where he has been and where he is going. Understand what the company has been through and WHERE ITS GOING. first OTC, and then to the FUCKING MOON.
