This is a new thing apes. At no point is a shf going to decide it's a good idea to close their positions. You can talk about kicking the can all you want but that is their only option. It's either hold off one more day or face total liquidation of everything they know. The can shall be kicked until their hand is forced by a total locking up of the float. When we get there if you didn't drs your shares then do you even own a single piece of GME. I'm not saying you need to drs but I don't ever intend to sell most of my shares.
