

Title: Vrooman & Dreesman bankruptcy due to BCG?

Author: AssBlasterNine

Created 2022-04-10 08:13:54 UTC

Permalink: /r/GME/comments/u0d6vo/vrooman_dreesman_bankruptcy_due_to_bcg/

Url: https://www.reddit.com/r/GME/comments/u0d6vo/vrooman_dreesman_bankruptcy_due_to_bcg/

Good morning ladies and gentlemen,

With the current focus on Boston Consultancy Group, where Ryan Cohen seems to post a lot about. I started thinking about what big national companies failed in recent years. As I am Dutch, national refers to the Netherlands.

In 2015 a big company called V&D;, otherwise known as V&D; Group Holding B.V., or Vroom & Dreesmann was a big Dutch chain of warehouses. Started in the streets of Amsterdam, where it turned into a huge company. V&D; was a publicly traded company on the AEX, Amsterdam Exchange. https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Vroom_%26_Dreesmann

The company that took over V&D; in 2010 was Sun Capital partners:

<https://suncappart.com/> who are still invested in 465+ companies, with roughly 14 billion in assets.

When you start digging into Sun Capital Partners, inc. you can find that there are some articles published in regard to the Boston Consultancy Group. Where some former BCG employees, who have made quite some careers for themselves, are now coming to Sun Capital Partners. As mentioned here: <https://www.pehub.com/sun-capital-taps-four-as-vps/>

I can't help but shake the feeling that Boston Consultancy Group, Sun Capital Partners, and therefore also, large hedge funds are all working in cahoots together... A lot of these articles on Wikipedia are no longer clickable due to their age.

As I am short on time, I'm not able to find any more information in regard to this issue, but I hope this will gain some traction, so that more of my fellow apes can look into it.