

Title: Yes, the price is going down, but hedge funds are still losing (tons of) money.

Author: ThatGuyWithACoolDog

Created 2022-01-26 01:47:05 UTC

Permalink: /r/GME/comments/scu1bz/yes_the_price_is_going_down_but_hedge_funds_are/

Url:

https://www.reddit.com/r/GME/comments/scu1bz/yes_the_price_is_going_down_but_hedge_funds_are/

I know it feels like we're losing. Shit, it feels like we've been losing since mid November. But in the face of all these red days and all the short attacks, hedge funds are still putting up record losses.

Check out Melvin, they're down 25% (so far) in January alone. This is with GME shares prices losing 25%+ in that same time.

This means it costs them FAR more money to keep this charade up than it is to profit off of it. The interest on these naked shorts must be KILLING their balance sheets.

So my question is, how long will they want to keep it up? Apes aren't leaving. In fact, we've bought a lot more. Like, A LOT MORE.

The writing is on the wall...

Let's hope the SEC passes their transparency regulations so we can see what's in their closets.

We want our tendies, and we aren't leaving until even the little guys get life changing money, too.

Stay classy apes.