

Title: Warning about full account transfer from TDA to Fidelity. TDA will cancel your account and not allow you access to even read-only portfolio information. They will not re-open your account. You will have zero access to information for you portfolio until the 5-8 business transfer is completed.

Author: wrongandright

Created 2021-10-11 19:24:48 UTC

Permalink: /r/DDintoGME/comments/q63kli/warning_about_full_account_transfer_from_tda_to/

Url:

https://www.reddit.com/r/DDintoGME/comments/q63kli/warning_about_full_account_transfer_from_tda_to/

FYI, I don't have enough karma to post to SuperStonk so am posting here.

I requested a full account transfer to Fidelity from TDA on Friday for my GME shares (and cash balance), it was received and initiated by TDA this morning. If you do this, TDA will cancel your account and you will have ZERO access to your portfolio while that is taking place. They will not re-open it and you will have zero visibility in regards to your account/portfolio metrics, analytics, nothing, until the 5-8 day account transfer is completed. They do that "to protect you and make sure that any trades you would have made will not cancel out the transfer protocol". Complete BS.

I made the account transfer because my original request for DRS was just simply not happening through TDA. My plan: transfer from TDA to Fidelity, then fully DRS because it would take less time than doing the full DRS through TDA.

Update: Called Fidelity, explained the situation. They expedited the transfer to 1 business day! They've been awesome so far.

My advice is to keep a share (or so) in TDA and wait until the transfer happens and then do the full account transfer. Tell Fidelity that's what you would like to do and explain why before they initiate the request to TDA.

Sorry for the typos in the title, I was a little, how would you say, emotional, when posting. Thanks for not giving me a hard time! I cringe when I see that and there I go, something something stones and glass houses.