Update

I wanted to write this follow-up after I understood new aspects after reading the comments and the help of unique users in this community.

I made this post based on the type of DD that got me into the stock, not knowing that there is more to the situation than what I thought is the reality. Then I wrote this post because what made me take this move was falling apart. I couldn't know how to ask what I am missing from the picture, and this was my mistake because I completely dismissed the options chain manipulation since I was not interested in options.

I will add that this is not to say that I understand, but that I should always be looking to add more knowledge and expand on different things that I may not think of as crucial because you never know.

I will refer to a beautiful quote I read which is "Nullius in verba," which means 'take nobody's word for it.

The lesson is - before I complain, I can ask what I'm missing out of the big picture.

Thanks to those who reached out for help; I genuinely appreciate it.

Before I start with my rant, I should make few things clear. I'm new in the stock market, I joined in Feb because of GME news, and I'm holding GME since then. It has been an excellent opportunity to learn about markets and investment, and I plan to continue no matter what happens to GME.

I suddenly realized that maybe no one knows what they are talking about; I read many of the DD and the explanations that the entire market is a scam and speculations about what would trigger the MOASS, but nothing connects back to GME price.

I'll mention few things that got hyped and died away with no retraction whatsoever

People \- DFV, Mark Cuban, Ryan Cohen, Gary Gensler, and many other evil names.

Financial Institutions \- Citadel, Melvin Capital, Point 72, BlackRock, Bank of America, Goldman Sachs, and Google maps to show that people are working overnight in all of these institutions then talk about which ones are permanently closed.

Events \- Shareholders meeting, voting, and announcing the vote count.

Technical Analysis \- Negative Beta, Ichimoku, Wedges, Volumes, OBV, and all those complicated charts, but it's all speculations. It seems that using TA to speculate is overstated.

And the list just goes on, and I don't see any proper reflection on what we got wrong. I just see new predictions and speculations. Don't ask questions. Just buy and hold.

Can I examine all the previous assumptions? I'm afraid even to ask any question because people may think that it's FUD or whatever the fuck they call asking questions these days.

I know that I may be disappointing. I just need to relieve myself from this attachment and the expectations that came with it.
