Hey everyone, I'm posting this because there is literally no one in my life who cares or even understands the gravity of the situation we're currently in. It's honestly really depressing to keep everything inside, so I'm just dumping thoughts into this post. I won't even specify any specific organization or industry because we damn well know the entire fucking system is irreparably fucked. As much as we're trying to do things to fix it, realistically people won't wake up until they're buying bread for 10$ a loaf and can't find work. I'm 19 years old in second-year university, studying finance. 90% of the time I have no idea why I'm even bothering because it feels like my future has been predetermined unless I decide to become one of the people I hate. I've been holding GME as my only hope of being able to live comfortably without sucking the dick of some corporate or Wallstreet scumbag for a 2% raise. Like idek at this point, I'm just so tired of it. No one my age gives a flying fuck about any of this from what I've seen, and it drives me insane because they're going to be obliterated once this shit hits the fan. My parents' pensions will get destroyed, the list goes on.

I know I can't be the only one who feels this way, and for all those that feel the same, just hold on. We're all doing our best to change this shit. DRS and hodl my fellow apes.
