Since I was 16 my dad was first diagnosed with colon cancer, I'm 20 now. The oncologists doctors etc said he would be just fine because colon cancer is 'easily' treated. I'm pretty sure he first had radiotherapy, it unfortunately didn't work and he had a growing polip in his colon, they removed a part of his colon which had the polip, just to find out months later they forgot another malicious one, removed that one, they then found out it went to his liver, cut a part out of his liver, they then found out the colon cancer spread to his lungs and this just kept going on.

This has been going on for so many years now, they kept forgetting something and it's made me so upset.

I've been praying for MOASS since May 2021 when I first stepped in this gme beautiful community.

My dad has around 3 months to live if he really fights against his declining will to live, all he does is sit on the couch in pain even with a shit ton of painkillers, the thing is he has another tumor in his hip which makes him almost unable to walk so he literally can't do anything.

What I just want to say is that I'll sell X amount of shares so I can get my dad one of the best cancer therapies there is and if he makes it, I'll sell the rest XX amount of shares to make his life worth living.

Sorry for my vent, a lot of emotions have been going through me these past years, I'm glad to be a part of this community and I hope my dad is still around to see what will happen to my bank account and the rest of my family's bank account.

Buy, hold, DRS and play with options if you understand it.

That's all.
