Try the one thing that gets so many down votes I don't expect anyone to see this.

I think we need to go dark for 48 hours. All GME subs and any other affiliated subs that even mention GME. No Reddit, YouTube... All of the backups are compromised as bad as Reddit so going dark across all platforms is the only way it would be effective. We're broadcasting our strategies and our fears 24/7 and they're just taking notes. They crush us on any hype day and even on good news they know is coming ahead of time. Like the split. They didn't crush us when RC tweeted out of nowhere that the marketplace was live. Because nobody knew it was coming. We all know what to do. BUY, DRS and HODL. That's it. That's the big plan. Why post 24/7 and feed their information stock pile.

A couple of days strategically planned for maximum effect, whether it be before or after the weekend, could possibly throw them off enough to make them make a mistake. They are just too good at this game. And when your enemy is just better than you that's exactly what you have to do. What harm could it really do? If anything it would give us all a well deserved mental break before the big boss fight.
