I had a blast with this - you knew I was on the panel, and I promise you're gonna LOVE this episode
I made a documentary about all of this and tried to answer some very difficult questions.

Amidst the backdrop of extremely distressing global events, there is a lot happening in the world of market structure. Next week will be a week unlike any other, since Jan 2021. We've got some very big initiatives coming together - an incredible confluence of events taking place.

I'm excited to reveal what we've been working on - I think next week will mark the "end of the beginning" - we've all learned so much, and now it's time to organize efforts and make our voices heard.

2022 will mark a turning point in market fairness and efficiency.

SEC just proposed a new rule requiring short position disclosure and a modification to CAT reporting of buy-to-close orders.

We'll have a full breakdown of this proposal and information on how to write comment letters ready for next week. Stay tuned!!

The rule would require institutional asset managers to disclose gross short positions to the SEC, and would result in public disclosure of aggregate short positions by the SEC on a per-security basis. It's a great step forward, but we'll have some thoughts on commenting for it.

Would be a good move. Needs to include put options & synthetic shorts

We've got something else cooking, that's a bit better than just cross promotion between streamers :)
