Started digging for the link for the report when it's published.. Google returned a MarketWatch article posted 1 hour ago about the SEC report. Couldn't read the whole article, but the leading sentences mentioned some of the contents.

The article has since been removed.... what gives? Just another example of news having info long before us poors.

I can't post on /Super. Feel free to cross post for me

Edit: It's there now because report is published. But originally posted at 3:30p EST, and then removed shortly after.

It's clear that news media gets advanced access to SEC reports. This isn't mind blowing by any means, but it's obvious that SEC slips info to media and likely other market participants prior to publication.
