Feb 21' UK ape here. Been averaging up and down since I bought in at $43 and, though it's not much, am a proud xx gme shareholder. Being in GameStop has taught me the value of money, as I'm forced to navigate my life through financial struggles whilst also putting some aside for GME. There have been ALOT of times I've needed the money I've put into GME, and every time I would hodl and endure. Like the time I fell through a pane of glass cutting off my toe and slicing through my ankle. I was off work for 2 months with little to no pay! Or the time I had to fork out hundreds for my cats surgery after some nutter shot her in the head with an air rifle. The list goes on, and now, with the cost of living shooting to the moon times are tough as ever.

Today's spike has put me back in the Green after a long time in the red. So, do I sell?

Hell nah I do what I do best and average that shit back up!
