Chris MacDonald is an MBA (finance) graduate with extensive experience covering small-, mid- and large-cap companies in the U.S. and Canadian markets. Chris is interesting in uncovering long-term and deep-value opportunities for investors based on principles from the Graham-Buffett school of thought, and looks forward to bringing investors a unique fundamental-based perspective on opportunities available in today's challenging investing environment.

His experience as a financial analyst in the past, coupled with his fervor for finding undervalued growth opportunities, contribute to his conservative, long-term investing perspective.
