So a week ago (I think) I posted "Hey, guys, here is my experience with trading from TDA. First guy didn't know squat, 2nd guy was helpful, 3-5 business days, blah blah blah. Figured it would help with any hesitation issues maybe.

While I was aware that this past Saturday was NOT the 5 biz day limit, I noticed my shares still in TDA so called 'em up to see what's what.

Guy essentially says "Yup I see where it's been initiated, but IDK who told you 3-5 biz days to complete. That's for broker-to-broker transfers. This is to a transfer agent and is currently a 10-15 biz day process.

"Ah. OK thanks". I didn't see the help in arguing or protesting, although I DID mention that Fidelity customers seems to have gotten everything through in under 72 hrs. (I believe I saw folks saying this here...).

He's got no good answer and I got nothing more to add, so I just say I'll continue to keep an eye on it. He DOES credit the expressed delay with the extremely high DRS request rate, so there's that. And I've seen people showing their transfer (account?) numbers now in the 6-digit range, vs 5 digits just a few weeks ago. IDK.

So I'm wondering... has anyone who has recently initiated a DRS transfer in the last week or so from TDA seen a quick change over? Or am I being stalled for... IDK what? For shenanigans?

Peace. And hold.

BTW I see accusations of forum sliding by posting the Griffin perjury accusations and getting away from CS posts. I mean, I'm not ORCHESTRATING an attempt to "get back on track, but FFS... there's always someone claiming something is a nefarious thing going on in these subs. I'm just here tryna get some feedback on dealing with TDA. THanks.
