Title: Will the brokers have to sprint for the finish line to avoid bankruptcy thus initiating the MOASS?
Author: Truth_Road
Created 2022-01-02 13:49:15 UTC
Permalink: /r/GME/comments/ru9yzf/will_the_brokers_have_to_sprint_for_the_finish/
Url: https://www.reddit.com/r/GME/comments/ru9yzf/will_the_brokers_have_to_sprint_for_the_finish/

Full disclosure. I am but a lowly smooth brain euro-poor who is only now in the process of DRSing my GME. I have sent one share off to CS to get the ball rolling and I'm currently waiting for that to go through. I apologise that I am this far behind the curve \[/grovel grovel grovel\].

So. The brokers. Over the past year or so I have seen repeated reference to the fact that the MOASS will in all likelihood bankrupt the brokers. I understand the order of events to look like this:

1. Retail has synthetic GME shares in their portfolio.

2. MOASS.

3. Retail decides to sell at $74,169,420 per share (a conservative estimate).

4. Brokers then need to actually come up with the shares to satisfy the sell order.

5. Brokers go bankrupt.

6. Boohoo retail. Should have DRS'd them when you had the chance.

Surely the brokers know this? In that case once the noose starts to tighten on market liquidity by means of DRS isn't it in the brokers interest to sprint for the finish and get their hands on some cold hard non-synthetic GME before the MOASS? Would such a thing itself accelerate the MOASS?